The LL.M. Program in Chinese Law
Room 106, Law School (Mingli Building),
Tsinghua University,
Haidian District, Beijing 100084
People’s Republic of China
Dear Friends,

Thank you for your interest in the LL.M. Program in Chinese Law at Tsinghua University School of Law.

Tsinghua University School of Law was originally established in 1929, and Legal education was formally conducted until 1952, when the Law School was merged into Peking University. The law school was reestablished in 1995, and since that time the Law School has been committed to training internationally oriented lawyers from around the world. As the world engages with China and China’s legal structure evolves, our graduates are capable of providing clients with the legal services that are crucial to making this transformation possible. Consistent with this mission, the LL.M. program in Chinese Law was formally introduced in 2005 – the first program of its kind in China.

The LL.M. Program in Chinese Law offered at Tsinghua was specifically designed for international students and legal professionals who are interested in studying the Chinese legal system. The program offers 15 courses taught entirely in English. To date, the program has attracted nearly one thousand applicants from 28 countries on five different continents. The program boasts graduates who have accomplished significant things both in their home countries and in the international arena.

In the midst of the new challenges and opportunities brought about by globalization and the new world order, legal education is facing an ever complex environment that demands legal scholars, practitioners and students to enrich their legal career with a cross-cultural experience. Our LL.M. Program in Chinese Law offers such an opportunity and we ensure that your study experience in Tsinghua, Beijing will be interesting and rewarding.

I thank you for your continued support to Tsinghua University School of Law and to this unique LL.M. program in Chinese Law.

WANG Zhenmin, Dean
Tsinghua University School of Law
Tsinghua University, located in the northwestern suburbs of Beijing, was established in 1911 on the site of "Qing Hua Yuan" - a former royal garden of the Qing Dynasty. Funded with part of the "Boxer Indemnity," it was at first a preparatory school called "Tsinghua Xuetang" for students selected by the government for studies in the United States.

On April 29, 1911, Tsinghua Xuetang began its first term, and from then on the last Sunday of April was set as the school's anniversary. The name was changed to "Tsinghua School" after the 1911 Revolution. In 1925, a section of university was established, offering a four-year program for students. In 1928, its name was changed to "National Tsinghua University", and in the autumn of 1929 a graduate school was set up.

Following the outbreak of the War of Resistance against Japanese Aggression in 1937, Tsinghua University, Peking University and Nankai University merged to form the Southwest Associated University in Kunming. After the war, Tsinghua University moved back to the original campus in Beijing and resumed operation at its present location.

Three years after the founding of the People's Republic of China, a nationwide restructuring of institutes of higher education was initiated, and in 1952, Tsinghua University became a multidisciplinary polytechnic university with an emphasis on training engineers. In November of that year, the Ministry of Education appointed Jiang Nanxiang as President.

Since 1978, during the period of reform and opening to the rest of the world, Tsinghua University has gradually restored such disciplines as science, economic management, humanities and law. In 1999, Tsinghua opened the School of Arts and Design by merging with the Central Academy of Arts and Design. Tsinghua has become a leading comprehensive research university with engineering as its focus, while concurrently offering degrees in science, liberal arts, management and law.

At the end of 2000, Tsinghua University had 13 schools and 54 departments, 44 research institutes, nine engineering research centers, and 163 laboratories, including 15 national key laboratories. The university offers 37 bachelor's degree programs, 107 master's degree programs and 64 Ph.D. programs.

To fully implement the "China Education Reform and Development Program," Tsinghua University has set new development targets for the next 15 years. Educational quality and effectiveness will be improved and disciplinary structure will be adjusted. Based on strength in engineering, the university will vigorously promote the development of science and humanity in general and focus on specific areas in the humanities, social sciences and law.

In less than 100 years, Tsinghua University has witnessed and shared the hardships and glories of the nation. The university's motto of "Self-discipline and Social Commitment" has inspired many generations of Tsinghua teachers and students to struggle for the prosperity of China. Now, striving to build Tsinghua University into a world-class university by its 100th anniversary in 2011 has become the objective of each member of the teaching staff and the student body.
Established in 1929, the Tsinghua University Law School in Beijing, China is now recognized as one of the premier institutions for legal education and research in China. Tsinghua Law School is ranked in the top 50 law schools worldwide (45th place in 2011) and is the only Chinese law school to make the top 100 QS World University Rankings for law. Tsinghua takes pride in its distinguished alumni of legal scholars, judges and lawyers, such as Justice Mei Ruao of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East (1946-1948) following World War II, Mr. Xiang Zhejun, the Chinese prosecutor at the International Military Tribunal for the Far East (1946-1948), Professor Qian Duansheng, constitutional advisor to the Constitution Drafting Committee of the People’s Republic of China (1953-1954), Mr. Zheng Tianxiang, former Chief Justice of the Supreme People’s Court of China (1983-1988), Mr. Duan Muzheng, former Deputy Chief Justice of the Supreme People’s Court of China (1990-2000), Mr. Jia Chunwang, former President and Procurator-General of the Supreme People's Procuratorate of China (2003-2008), Mr. Zhang Fusen, former Minister of Justice of China (2000-2005), and Justice Wang Tieya of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia in the 1990s. Tsinghua Law School weathered periods of societal turbulence in 20th-century China through relocating, merging with other universities in China, and temporarily shutting its doors.

Since 1995, when Tsinghua Law School was reestablished to answer the call to strengthen the rule of law in China, the law school has enjoyed remarkable growth in prominence, and now resides in state-of-the-art facilities on the Tsinghua University campus in northwest Beijing. The Tsinghua Law School currently hosts more than 1,300 of China’s brightest students in various undergraduate and graduate programs, as well as the Chinese mainland’s first English-language LL.M. program on Chinese law, attracting top scholars and legal practitioners from around the globe. Tsinghua Law School’s faculty features renowned experts on Chinese law and comparative law, including Justice Zhang Yuejiao of the Dispute Settlement Body of WTO (2008-present), Andrew Li Kwok-nang, the first Chief Justice of the Court of Final Appeal of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of the People’s Republic of China (1997-2010), and Justice Gao Zhiguo of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (2008-present). Many of Tsinghua Law School’s nearly 60 faculty members have studied and taught at leading universities in the US and Europe. Backed by the rich history, academic strength, and reputation of Tsinghua University, Tsinghua Law School is vibrantly contributing to the advancement of the rule of law in China.
The LL.M. Program in Chinese Law at Tsinghua is the first formal legal educational program ever offered in China for foreign law students and professionals.

As a country with a rich cultural heritage and the largest market in the world, China is a leading destination of Foreign Direct Investment and one of largest import/export countries worldwide. To ensure sustainable social economic progress, the country has established a complex legal infrastructure through enacting the laws and regulations on a historic scale.

With globalization as the new norm, Chinese law becomes necessary knowledge for those who have international business, cultural, academic and political ambitions. To meet the increasing demand for understanding Chinese law, Tsinghua Law School proudly offers an LL.M. Program in Chinese law for non-Chinese speaking law students and legal professionals.

Only non-Chinese citizens are eligible to apply. An applicant must meet one of the following requirements:

- J.D., LL.B. or equivalent law degree; or
- Enrollment in a J.D. program; or
- Qualification to practice law.

* The application deadline for the LL.M. Program is March 31.
The program consists of two types of courses: mandatory and elective.

Courses in Fall Term 2015:
- Chinese Society and Chinese Law (3)*
- Chinese Constitutional and Administrative Law (2)*
- Chinese Civil Law (3)*
- Chinese Civil Procedure (3)
- Chinese Criminal and Criminal Procedural Law (2)
- Chinese Environmental Law (2)
- Chinese Contract Law (2)
- Chinese Course (2)

* The asterisk denotes mandatory course.

All of the above courses will be offered within the academic year. The courses will be taught by the Tsinghua Law School faculty in English, as well as adjunct faculty of experienced, practicing lawyers. Most of the mandatory and foundational courses are offered in the fall semester, while most of the elective courses are offered in the spring semester. Apart from the above courses, the LL.M. program in Chinese Law requires each candidate to produce a paper as the degree thesis, which takes 1 credit.

The LL.M. Program requires a minimum of 24 credits. To earn the degree, a student must satisfactorily complete approximately ten courses (depending on the credit hours assigned to a particular course) and a research paper as the degree thesis within two semesters.

Students who demonstrate Chinese language abilities and wish to audit courses taught in Chinese may seek permission from the LL.M. Program to do so.

As permitted under the American Bar Association accreditation regulations, Juris Doctor students from the US may also choose to take one semester or an entire year of courses at Tsinghua and request permission from their home law schools to apply the credits toward their Juris Doctor degree. Students coming for only one semester must attend the fall semester, as that is when most of the compulsory and basic courses are offered, and get a certificate. Students who take one semester for the first time at Tsinghua may come again to complete another semester within two years in order to get the degree.
Tuition

The tuition for the LL.M. Program is RMB ¥146,000.

Scholarship

LL.M. Program provides two scholarships for the year 2015. Each of the scholarships will cover half of full-year tuition for full-year program applicants. The deadline for application for the scholarships is March 31th, 2015.

Accommodation

The university offers comfortable dormitories with easy access to the university’s classrooms, faculty offices and other facilities. They house students from all over China and around the world. Students who want to stay with Chinese families or rent apartments available in the market may do so by their own arrangement.

The current charges (subject to change):

• a shared room with a private bathroom, air-conditioning, color television and internet access is RMB ¥ 40—45 per day;
• a single room with a private bathroom, air-conditioning, color television and internet access is RMB ¥ 65—85 per day.

With a high quality teaching staff, Tsinghua Law School has been engaging actively in various research projects, many of which are supported by the National Social Science Foundation, Ministry of Education, other ministries and foundations. It conducts frequently various seminars by reputable national and foreign scholars and experts, organizes conferences and other academic events.

Fully understanding the trend of globalization, the school regards external cooperation and exchanges as an integral part of its academic development, which has made it an open law school with a global vision. The exchange programs with many leading law schools in the U.S.A., U.K., France, Germany and many other countries have assisted greatly its advance for excellency.

The students enthusiastically hold all kinds of academic activities, ranging from the Ming-Li Forum, to the lunch salon lectures, from mooting contests to publication of students’ academic periodicals. Tsinghua student teams have made outstanding achievements in various moot competitions, both domestic and international.

The students are also active in taking practice-oriented activities. They offer, as volunteers, legal services to the disadvantaged and the poor in clinic programs, provide lectures to middle and primary school students and local officials, conduct field study in various local places. They enjoy dynamic and colorful lives at Tsinghua Law School.

The LL.M. program in Chinese Law organizes visits to leading Chinese and international law firms and to various places of tourist attraction. LL.M. students participate actively in sports, music, and art activities. Judges, lawyers and visiting scholars give lectures and host discussions. We believe these activities would enrich their college life, broaden their academic horizon and help them better understand China and its culture.

In the academic ambience of the Law School, the faculty and students of Tsinghua Law School, following Tsinghua’s spirit of "Action speaks louder than words", have taken firm steps on the path of academic pursuance.

"Tsinghua University School of Law is an ideal place for foreign students to study Chinese law, not only because of its excellent faculty, but also because of its state of art facility. Temple University Beasley School of Law and Tsinghua Law School have been jointly undertaking educational programs for years. Tsinghua Law School is profoundly committed to international legal education. Many of its faculty who are experts in Chinese law have also studied overseas."
